Hodgman-Little house-
East Street-
spoken of as the Josiah Hodgman house, now owned by Mrs. George Little.

This large old house with central chimney, situated about a mile from the village of Carlisle, on East Street, was probably built by William Spaulding. He was then living in the small house across the road and had a family of three daughters. Two sons had died in infancy and a third lived only five years. Another daughter had lived to become six years old, so of the seven children which came into his home, only three daughters lived to maturity.

Lois, the youngest daughter, married Asa Monroe and remained at home with her parents for a few years before removing to Marlow, N.H, from which they returned to Carlisle, some years later.

Anna, the oldest daughter, married Zebulun Blood in 1799 and in 1818 Lucy married Josiah Hodgman. Old residents now living who knew these latter families, say that the father William Spaulding erected this house and gave it to these two daughters, making provision by deed, for them to get water from the home well, to use certain portions of the cellar of the parental residence, and have a right of way through the ancestral fields. Apparently the shallow well on the new place dried up at certain seasons of the year, but just why the daughters were to use the cellar of the smaller house is not known today. I have been in the smaller cellar and would hardly consider it adequate for three, or even two, families.

If the house was built when Anna married in 1799, it was no doubt retained in ownership by her father till the marriage of Lucy in 1818 made it advisable to give it to them equally. One reason for thinking it was built in 1799 instead of 1818 is because there is no visible evidence of its being constructed for two separate families.

Mr. Fred P. Nickles, who has had opportunity to study this house, writes: "The front door is old beyond question; the side lights which only come down to the chair rail, are old and the stools show evidence of being untouched. Also there is a single winding staircase in the hall which would not have been constructed for two families. The ell, however, is not old. What happened was that a kitchen and wood-shed were added on and the house adapted for two families, the front door and hall being used as a common entrance."

As originally built there was no ell. On the east end, one was later put on and used as a shoe-maker's shop where two men were employed. It was afterwards removed, placed on the back of the house and is now the pantry. Still later the large ell was built which is there now. There was an open shed on the west end which has since been removed.

The Josiah Hodgman family lived in the east half of the house and the Zebulon Bloods in the west, where they remained during their married life. Two children were born to Mr. & Mrs. Blood: Hariot, born Sept. 10-1801, who married Abel Spalding of Chelmsford, and William Spaulding Blood, born Dec. 23-1804.

The Bloods were succeeded by the family of Jefferson Nickles and during their occupancy this place was known as the "Jeff Nickles place."

Jefferson Nickles, son of Job and Polly (Frost) Nickles, was "of Saco, Maine" at the time of his marriage in Carlisle, May 10-1832, to Charlotte Belknap, daughter of Captain Daniel and Molly (Parker) Belknap. The mother of Charlotte Belknap was sister of Major Jonas Parker, and Charlotte was daughter by her first husband Daniel Belknap. After his death she married John Dexter of Acton and lived near the Eastman-Reynolds place on East St. Carlisle, indicated today only by a cellar hole. Thus the Hodgman-Little house is not far from the childhood home of Charlotte (Belknap) Nickles.

Mr. and Mrs. Nickles had three children: (1) Warren, born 1833, died when five years of age; (2) Melvina, born 1836, did not live to be two years old, and (3) Charlotte Elmira, born 1839, who married Samuel H.[7] Robbins in 1860.

After the death of his wife, Charlotte Belknap, Jefferson Nickles married, second, Martha P. Gould of Lowell, in 1863. She died in 1876 and Jefferson died in 1896 being nearly 88 years old.

The western half of the house was then acquired by Anthony Jones on a mortgage, and soon after, bought by Edward J. Carr.

The eastern end of the house, first given to Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Hodgman, was their home for many years. One of their wedding presents was a fine tall clock built especially for them, which is today keeping time in the home of their grandchildren

Irene V. and Arthur W. Hodgman in Lowell, Mass.

Nine children came to Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Hodgman: (1) Lucy, b. 1819, married Joseph Lewis, Jr. of Lowell, as his second wife; (2) Sarah, b. 1820, married Gilman Hunter of Chelmsford; (3) Josiah, b. 1821, died at the age of ten years; (4) Ira, b. 1823, died at sea, aged 29. He was a shoemaker; (5) Abel Goodrich, b. 1826, m. Rosanna (Hardy) Whitney and lived the last years of their lives in Carlisle in the Jacobs-Wilkins house; (6) John Nelson, b. 1828, d. 1897, married Sarah B. Brown and Sophia A. Fletcher; (7) Mary, b. 1830, married Nathaniel B. Boynton of New Hampshire; (8) Josiah, b. 1833, d. 1892, married Maria Bingham; (9) Benjamin, b. 1837, d. 1918, m. (1) Hannah Green Heald, and (2nd) Laura J. Crosby.

After the Hodgman family, the Congregational Church acquired, on a mortgage, this half of the house, a barn, and a tract of 89 acres of land on the opposite side of the road. It was disposed of to Miss Frances A. Flower of Lowell, in August, 1899, but she never lived in it, although she established some of her relatives there. In 1900, Edward J. Carr secured it, being then a dealer in real estate, and by the purchase of the western half of the building, already spoken of, became the sole owner of the entire farm and buildings. In October 1901, Herbert P. Dutton moved in, to run the farm in partnership with Mr. Alvah Carr, who had bought it with Mr. Wm. Clark, from E. J. Carr his father.

The next owner was Mr. George Little who came here with his family from West Medford, making it first a seasonal home, but later a permanent one. On May 27-1916 he disposed of his farming implements, cattle &c. at public auction and returned to West Medford to live, coming week-ends and summers to Carlisle. After the death of Mr. Little and the marriage of several of their children, these periodical sojourns have ceased. The house has been rented to various families but is still owned by Mrs. Little.

The old names remain attached to the buildings in the 1930 inventory of the property. It speaks of the "Nickles-Hodgman house, Haywood barn and Jeff Nickles barn." The extent of the farm is a little more than 128 acres.

I asked Mr. A. W. Hodgman of Lowell, to give me something of his memories of this old house, and he wrote the following:

"My Uncle Si, Josiah Hodgman, I think lived out near Amherst, Mass. till perhaps 1870, then he went to live with his mother, who died in 1874. He built on the wing toward Billerica. The old part had a good sized front room, and a small square room behind it. Both these rooms opened into a large kitchen in the new part. There was a sort of shed at the east end of the new part, with a staircase between the kitchen and it. To the north of the new part was a pantry and one bedroom. I doubt if more than one.

Upstairs (narrow winding front stairs) there was a large bedroom over the front room, and a smaller one back of it and over the square room below. I think Uncle Si used the bedroom over the kitchen; but the room over the shed he let out to a man (named Blood) and wife; the man had a wooden leg, at least was lame.

There was nothing in the way of old furniture that I remember. At the auction, about 1895, mother bought the clock, powder horn, and a certain heavy white pie dish with cover. That eventually got broken.

The one great puzzle to me, is, how did a half-house, four rooms all told, take care of my grandparents and their nine children! Grandfather died of T. B. æt. 51 or 52; his daughter Mary Boynton died of T. B. a few months after her marriage. Aunt Sarah Hunter's three children died of T. B. People did not know how to live in those days."

Little House-

Mr. A. W. Hodgman of Lowell, writes (Aug. 18-1935):

"I have often wondered how Josiah and Lucy Spaulding Hodgman ever reared a family of nine children in the eastern half of that house, with only four rooms, — for the ell was added by my Uncle Josiah when he went there to live.

You see, Jeff Nickles lived in the western half, as far back as I can remember. But it has occurred to me that perhaps Josiah and Lucy had the whole house of eight rooms originally, so I went to the Court House in Lowell, to see if I could find deed from Josiah to Jeff Nickles but I could not find any. The Court House records in Lowell begin about 1855. Then I had occasion to go to Probate records at East Cambridge on Aug. 9, and I crossed over to the Registry of Deeds, but I did not seem to find anything there, at least not in the time I could give to the search then-

Of course, Mrs. Green belongs to a later generation than Josiah* Hodgman and Jeff Nickles, but she may have some idea, from hearsay, as to whether Jeff Nickles owned the western half, as I have always supposed; or whether Josiah never owned more than the eastern half. People did not have much idea of health or hygiene a hundred years ago. My grandfather, Josiah Hodgman died of consumption, aE. 52-11; my grandmother Isabelle Crosby died of consumption, aE. 46. So it was supposed my sister and I would never live to be 10 years old. But I am 66 and she is nearing 61. Mother died 7 years ago today, aE. 82-2-12. Father died in October, 1918 aE. 81-1. My best guess is that longevity in my grandfather Crosby's family came from his mother, Abigail Cook, 1773-1868; but whether she derived it straight from Francis Cook of the Mayflower, I could not venture to guess-"

* In 1860 Jefferson Nickles owned ½ house and Lucy Hodgman had ½ house the same year- (Carlisle Valuation book).

Hodgman Genealogy.

The Hodgman genealogy was started by the Rev. E. R. Hodgman as far back as 1858 or '59. About 1914 it was taken up again by Mr. Fred C. Hodgman, brother of Eleanor Hodgman Porter, the author of Pollyanna. The gaps are now being filled in by Mr. Arthur W. Hodgman, former professor for thirty-seven years in the Department of Classical Languages and Literature in the Ohio State University at Columbus, Ohio, but since 1933, living in Lowell, Mass.

Through his generous cooperation, the following local Hodgman lines have been compiled. It will be noted that Prof. Hodgman's father, Benjamin[8] Hodgman, was a native of Carlisle.....

I Thomas[1] Hodgman, 1640-1729.

II Josiah Webber[2] Hodgman, m. Elizabeth---

III Thomas[3] Hodgman, m. Abigail Geary.

IV Josiah[4] Hodgman, m. Rebecca Buss.

V Josiah[5] Hodgman, m. Rebecca Foster

VI Josiah[6] Hodgman, m. Sarah C. Cummings

VII Josiah[7] Hodgman, m. Lucy Spaulding

VIII Benjamin[8] Hodgman, m. (2nd) Laura J. Crosby

IX Arthur Winfred[9] Hodgman.

Thomas Hodgman.

Thomas Hodgman deposed 20-5-1675, aged about 35, so born about 1640.

m. (1st) Salem, Mass. Oct. 1661, Katherine More.
no farther record.

m. (2nd) Reading, Mass. Aug. 12-1663, Mary ( ) Morrill, widow of Ezekiel Morrill (buried Roxbury, May 22-1663). She died Reading, Nov. 10-1735 in her 96th year, so born about 1640, as well as Thomas'.

"So Thomas' Hodgman is found first at Salem; soon after at Reading where he passed his life. No one knows from what part of England he came; one correspondent said Yorkshire, but I doubt it."

Josiah Webber, son of Josiah, b. Reading, May 31-1668, was adopted by Thomas Hodgman; Middlesex Deeds. 14/382, June 30-1703, proves this. The date of adoption is not known. Nothing is known of his parents.
m. (1st) Reading, May 18-1691, Elizabeth ------ another puzzle.

Thomas[3] Hodgman, only child, b. Reading, Feb. 18-1692/3. Removed to Concord, Mass.

(From Mr. A. W. Hodgman).

Mr & Mrs. George W. Hodgman observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary Monday, Nov. 19-1934, at their home on Monument St. Concord, Mass, the old Hodgman homestead of five generations. During the day they entertained over 100 friends, including relatives from out of town. They were assisted by their children and grandchildren. Mrs. Hodgman's gown was of violet velvet, near the shade of her wedding dress of 50 years ago- Refreshments were served during the afternoon and evening-

They received many beautiful gifts, a purse of money and many flowers of golden hue. The rooms were decorated with cut flowers and evergreens- Old-time friends gathered to make the day a happy one, bringing back sweet memories-

5. Thomas Marshall, b. Carlisle, Jan 12 - 1850, d. Carlisle March 18 - 1872 aged 22 - 2 - 6.

6. Charles True, b. Carlisle, Oct. 15 - 1851.

The True Wiggin house stood on the site of the very old Benjamin Barrett place, and was later owned by J. B. Hall and still later by a Mr. Fecteau, who was occupying it when it burned in 1925. The Andersons have a house on that site now.

Benjamin Barrett sold this farm to True Wiggin and bought a place in the village and built a house later owned by Rev & Mrs Martin Lovering, and now by Mrs Covant.

The True Wiggin house was built by Humphrey Prescott, a fine carpenter of Carlisle whose workmanship was of the best. The house which he made for Mr. Wiggin was one of the best in town. It had folding wooden shutters at the windows and much good panelling.

Mr. True Wiggin was a man of considerable influence, and well-to-do. The house was large and had a piazza across the front. There was also a very large barn.

Mr. Wiggin married Miss Martha Marshall, sister to Mary Marshall's mother, who lived in the tiny house further west on Curve Street near the Ephraim Robbins farm. Their son Francis was killed in the Civil war and his name is on the monument in Carlisle centre. There are no Wiggins in Carlisle today.

Blood-Lovejoy house-
River Road-

For many years there stood on the east side of the River Road, a small house known in former years as the Henry Bull place, because of his long occupancy there. It still stands there (1939) but so effectually incorporated into the larger addition built by Mr. Frederick H. Lovejoy in 1931, that one does not realize it had a century-long separate existence.

On the 1779 map it appears to be owned by Willard Blood and was, no doubt, one of the Blood farms along the Concord river in the early settlement of Concord and Carlisle.

Willard Blood, son of John and Esther ( ) Blood, b. Dec. 28-1750 in Concord, died there Dec. 24-1823 at the age of 73 years. On March 30-1809 he married Matilda Wright, also born in Concord, and to them was born their son, Cyrus, April 7-1814. In 1848 Syrus (Cyrus?) and Matilda Blood (widow) conveyed this farm to Samuel Devens, and in 1861 Francis P. Devens, who had acquired it by will from Samuel, conveyed it to George Goodrich who in turn sold it in 1864 to Frank McCoy. Mrs Mary D. Bull, wife of Henry Bull of Harvard, Mass. got the property by taking over a mortgage originally given by Frank McCoy to Sarah A. Lawrence. Mr. Henry Bull was an uncle to Sidney and John Bull, later residents in Carlisle. Mary D Bull in 1893 conveyed to Harry D. Swift, who two years later sold it to Isaac B. Fletcher, who, the next year, 1896, sold it to George W. Hodgman who held it till 1903 when he sold it to Peter Koffard.

Miss Stacy, a teacher in the Chandler School in Boston, owned it for a few years and did quite a little inside repairing. Mrs Harry (Belle M.) Garfield, wife of Pres. Harry A. Garfield of Williams College, bought it and used it as a summer home, to be near their son, Mason Garfield who lived upon the adjoining farm. The ownership next passed to Frederick H. Lovejoy of Cambridge, who is now the owner and occupant in its enlarged condition.

While it is impossible from my limited study of this house to say when it was built, it seems likely it was by the Bloods. One can only guess at the many changes which must have taken place during these successive ownerships—

The east end of the little house was obviously the first and oldest portion, and the western half added later. The depth of the copping is quite a lot wider in this latter portion. A fireplace with semi-circular hearth, is very wide, accommodating four foot logs. The mantel is consequently long with panelling above.

When Mr. Lorejoy took the property, alterations and additions had already been begun, but now Mr William Kussin, architect, and Mr. John Bent, contractor, began more extensive changes. A large house was built and this little old one was used as an Ell, keeping most of the interior intact. A bathroom was put where the hall and front door had been, and the fireplace and woodwork left undisturbed except to repair them. It was a happy thought to change the original house so little.

Mr & Mrs Lorejoy took interest in town affairs, he being town treasurer in 1933 and '34, and member of the Board of Selectmen during years 1935, 6 and 7 and chairman in 1937. Mrs Caryl (Peabody) Lorejoy was one of the charter members of the Carlisle Historical society. She also was a member of the corporation of the Nursery Training School in Boston (1933) and held membership in various out-of-town social and educational societies.

Their hobby was the training of sled dogs, and their kennels of Siberian huskies are known throughout New England. Mr Lorejoy was elected President of the New England Sled Dog Club in 1935 and participates regularly in races in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. One of his celebrated dogs was Scaramouche, son of Chinook which went with Admiral Byrd to the South Pole and there lost his life.

In Sept. 1934, Mrs Caryl Lorejoy passed away after a long illness. She bequeathed one hundred dollars to the Carlisle Historical Society for general purposes.

In 1936, Mr. Lorejoy married Miss Polly Eusign, dau. of Mr. & Mrs Joseph H. Eusign of Simsbury, Conn. She attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington and was a member of the Junior League of Hartford. Mr. Lorejoy, son of Frederick B. Lorejoy of Montclair, N. J. was graduated from the Choate School and from Yale with the class of 1918, where he was a member of the University crew and the Psi Upsilon and Wolf's Head. He is also a member of the University Club of New York
